From the London Times, Oct. 20. We are just parting with a visitor who, it is now placed beyond doubt, attracted great attention, and placed beyond doubt, attracted great attention, probably excited great alarm, at his last visit, more than probably excited great alarm, at his last visit, more than to the nere and the best hands picked from 250 to 200 all of Onslow country. two thousand years ago. In confirmation of this prediction at home with this Comet, and welcome it as an old Dr. J. Lawrence experimented on a one acre lot in this at nome with this comes, and a one acre lot in this friend. Beyond a doubt, however, at some esteemed correspondent :time or other in that period so familiar and so dear to most of us precisely the same sign was seen in the skies. MIAH might have tried to read its warning.

But how different the significance of the wondrous sight at the two periods! Till modern times the boldest conjecture never placed Comets so far as the Moon; meteoric than celestial bodies. Thus they were described as hanging over a doomed city, and marking the very site of a Divine visitation. They were naturally compared to a flashing scimeter or the burning brand .-The very expression is, that a Comet blazed in the sky. We are not aware that it ever occurred to astronomers till two or three centuries ago that Comets returned, the variety in their appearance produced by the different place of the earth in its orbit being quite enough to baffle any attempt to identify them. No sooner was it found that Comets are in fact planetary bodies, revolving round the Sun by the same law as ourselves, than speculators ran into the other extreme, and fondly hoped they might be links Neptune, the most distant and last discovered planet of the Pope's almoner." our system; but even this does not carry him one-thousandth part of the distance of the nearest fixed star .-Let any one take a half-sheet of note paper, and marking a circle with a sixpence in one corner of it, describe therein our solar system, drawing the orbits of the Earth and the inferior planets as small as he can by the aid of a magnifying glass. If the circumference of the sixpence stands for the orbit of Neptune, then an oval filling the page will fairly represent the orbit of our Comet; and if the paper be laid on the pave ment under the west door of St. Paul's the length of that edifice will inequately represent the distance of the nearest fixed star. That the Comet should take more than 2.000 years to travel round the page of note paper we have supposed is explained by its great diminuition of speed as it recedes from the Sun. At its perihelion, or as we have seen it move lately, it has travelled 127 000 miles an hour, or more than twice as fast as the Earth, whose motion is about a thousand miles a minute. At its aphelion, however, or its greatest distance from the Sun, the Comet is a very slow body, sailing along, as if doubtful whether to return, at the rate of 480 miles an hour. This is only eight times the speed of a railway express. At this pace, even if the Comet could wholly shake off the attraction of the Sun-which it certainly could not-and were it to travel onward in a still traveling half-way between our Sun and the nearest given great satisfaction in this section. Send me another fixed star. Comets, then, can hardly be imagined visitors from our system to any other, or from any other to our own. But a and other mechanics: who from the nature of their employcomet seems to combine in one all the difficult problems of observation and calculation. Though it cannot but move by the same laws as our own planets, yet the ellipse is so immense and the course homeward towards the Sun so straight, that it is necessary to make the false assumption of a parabolic motion. The true ellipse, however, ascertained, the difficulty does not cease; for the Comet is so disturbed by the attraction of the planets near which it successively passes that the orbit of one day is contradicted by the orbit of the nextcurve, velocity, period, distance, all changing from hour to Patent Medicines, and the public generally, are apprised superior FLOUR. We are now prepared to furnish our hour. Even when we know, as we do with regard to that I have appointed Dr. A. O. BRADLEY, Wholesale and customers with a good and reliable article. Halley's Comet, its history for two thousand years, and Retail Agent for the sale of GRAY'S GENUINE OINTMENT can tell the period and other elements of its orbit for all that time, still at every fresh return the Comet suffers planetary disturbances which affect it forever. But the material, the construction, the internal history of Comets are still inscrutable. The utmost observation and research have failed to discover any weight in them.-The Comet now receding from our view passed on Monday within nine millions miles of Venus, and if it had any density at all comparable to our own would have affected the orbit of that planet in an appreciable degree.
